The Sanctuary of Bom Jesus do Monte is a Portuguese Catholic shrine in Tenões, outside the city of Braga, in northern Portugal. Its name means Good Jesus of the Mount.

Porto also known as Oporto is the second largest city in Portugal after Lisbon.

Barcelos

Barcelos is a city and a municipality in Braga District in the Minho Province, in the north of Portugal. The town is closely associated with the Rooster of Barcelos which often serves as a national symbol of Portugal.

The Rooster

The town is closely associated with the Rooster of Barcelos which often serves as a national symbol of Portugal. One of the many legends of the rooster involves the town's long history along a pilgrimage route. The story involves a wealthy man throwing a grand party, which ended after the silver had gone missing. Among the guests was a pilgrim, who was accused of theft, and pleaded innocence before a judge. Unswayed by the pilgrim's claims, the judge sentenced the pilgrim to be hanged. As final protest, the pilgrim invoked divine intercession: the rooster being prepared for the judge's dinner would crow three times as proof of his innocence. As the execution approached, the judge at his dinner table watched the roasted bird miraculously crow three times. The judge quickly released the pilgrim, who would later return to Barcelos and commission a statue commemorating the divine providence.
